"MOON SHINE."
A Suspicion That the Famous Article is Now Made in This County.
"Yes sir," not an hour ago, said Deputy Sheriff John Pickens, Monday, "a reputable citizen of the Eastern portion of the county told me that he had every reason to believe that 'moon shine' liquor was being manufactured in his neighborhood, but as for as proving it, or locating the worm, that was something, that could not be done. While you might be cocksure that not three miles from you."
"Inspiring hold John Barley corn" was trickling into life, you might be just as sure that you never could locate the "machine."
"Two or three years ago," continued the officer, one was operated in that section. Men have told me how they contrived to get "a wee drop" of the mountain dew occasionally. To a certain cave they went; an oyster can and a string would successfully bring from the bowels of the earth a pint or a quart, you put some silver in the can, lowered it with the string, you pulled on the string and behold the can had been transformed into a bottle. An officer went on the search for that distillery, but he never captured it; he found "bar signs" but no "bar."
It was generally believed that the worm was brought near Marion, and worn successfully for a season. Some of the wooded hills of Crittenden with their caves and shadowy valleys, afford ample security for the business that we supposed to be confined exclusively to the wild and woolly mountain counties.
THE OLD STORY.
Of Man's Perfidy and Woman's Weakness.
Friday two more big damage suits were filed in the Crittenden Circuit Court. Each asks for a judgement against Henry Yeakey for $10,000. Annie Jacobs is the plaintiff in one and her father, M. P. Jacobs is the plaintiff in the other.
The parties all live in the Hurricane neighborhood. Henry Yeakey is a young man, not yet twenty-one years old; he and Anne Jacobs lived in the same neighborhood, and according to the petition of the young lady, Henry paid court to her a long time, won her affections; and the day was fixed for their marriage, but when it came around the intended groom failed to perform his part of the contract, leaving the State, which caused the plaintiff great pecuniary loss, and mental suffering, the defendant having robbed her of her virtue. She therefore prays for damages in the sum $10,000.
Mr. M. P. Jacobs also filed suit against Henry Yeakey for having seduced his daughter, depriving him of her service and causing him great anxiety and mortification, shame and disgrace, and he prays for damages in the sum of $10,000.

The Opening.
Friday night the doors of the great hostelry at Crittenden Sulphur Springs were formally thrown open to the public, and the beginning of the most prosperous season the famous Springs was inaugurated.
The success of the opening ball exceeded the most sanguine expectations.
Memphis, Cairo, Paducah, Evansville, Henderson, Owensboro, Louisville, Morganfield, Princeton, Marion and other towns were represented, more than 200 hundred being present and participating in the past time and festivities of the occasion. The large house was full to overflowing; notwithstanding the unexpected large crowd the managers showed their ability to provide for everybody, and the handsome way in which affairs were handled brought scores of compliments upon Messrs Jenkins and Smith.
Crittenden is just beginning the most prosperous era of her history, and her fine medicinal waters and magnificently appointed hotel will add to its good reputation as the years go by.

STEPHENS WITHDRAWS.
He Takes A Sombre View of the Situation and Retreats.
Mr. P. C. Stephens paid the Press a call yesterday afternoon, and requested us to withdraw his name from before the people as a candidate.
He said, "In retiring from the race, I desire to thank the friends who stood by me, and those who are yet faithful to my banner. I appreciate their support, and shall always remember their kindness. While I retire from the field, I still feel that I had a good chance to win the nomination yet, but the shape matters have taken clearly indicates that the final fight will be a long, hard one, and I do not care to take the job on my hands. I had assurance, that would do to rely upon, that if I had been the nominee, the party would have had no opposition in the final race, but as the chances appeared to be against me, the opposition is taking shape, hence I do not desire to prolong an uncertain fight for the nomination which is an uncertainty, even if won."
